Excerpt: . gathered about us and manifested a great interest in our every word and action. As we continued talking, the room became so crowded with visitors that an adjoining stable had to be opened for their accommodation. Men, women and children crowded near to hear at least, and I trust to hear with a teachable spirit, what we had to say to them from the word of God. Never, during my brief missionary life thus far, have I had opportunity to preach to a more interesting group of precious souls. Thanks to God, who hath counted even me worthy to engage in such a blessed work as this, of declaring to ignorant and degraded, but partially awakened souls, the unsearchable riches of Christ. Two or three facts relative to this visit are worthy of notice. First, the day selected for the visit was that on which the council, of which our host was a member, was wont to assemble. Our friend Busdig, avowing his determination to entertain the Protestants, positively refused to meet with the primates of the town, although they had sent him repeated and special requests to be present at their meeting. Moreover it was one of the Armenian fast-days. This we all knew. But our friend showed that the power which the priesthood had over him was not very great; for, somewhat to our surprise, he furnished us with an abundant dinner, and ate with us. There we sat--a Turk...
